REFORMED PRACTICE OF MEDICINE.

DRS. J. B. DAY and T. F. HARRIS, RESPECTFULLY inform their friends, and the public generally, that they have formed a co-partnership, for the purpose of practicing medicine in Lexington, and the adjacent country. Their shop is on Main-Street, directly opposite Brennan's (formerly Postlethwaite's) Hotel, where they may be found at all times except when absent on professional business.
We beg leave to inform our friends and the public, that our principle and practice are essentially different from the ordinary mineral course, and also from the Thompsonian or Steaming plan. We practice according to the principles of the Reformed Medical Society of the United States, as taught at its Colleges in New York and Warrington, Ohio, discrediting all the preparations of mercury, antimony and other poisonous minerals so much used by physicians of the present day, and which are so deleterious to the human system; using in their stead vegetable remedies, far more powerful in removing disease, and which leave the constitution unimpaired. The experience of several years, has fully proved that mineral medicines internally, are entirely unnecessary in the treatment of any disease, and we believe there are but few of those who have taken them, who will hesitate to say that they are injurious, uncertain and dangerous in their operation. We admit that it contains some good, but it is entirely too limited, too heating or stimulating, and steam is too frequently and indiscriminately used.
We use no preparations of medicines which are numbered, and for which there is a patent right. Further, we believe that no man can make a good physician, without a knowledge of the anatomy of the human system, and every other branch of medical science. We presume it is generally known that the Thompsonians deny the necessity of such knowledge.
Having made a candid statement of our principles, and the course we intend to pursue, we ask those afflicted with disease, to pause, and choose between remedial agents drawn from Nature's garden, powerful in removing disease, but safe in their operation, and those drawn from the mines, which so often destroy the lives or future health of those who take them.
J. B. DAY.
T. F. HARRIS.
P. S. For a further knowledge of our principles, &c. we refer our friends to a medical work published by Dr. W. Beach, consisting of three large volumes, of which is "Beach's American Practice." It can be seen either at our shop, or at Skillman's book store, with a list of its numerous recommendations by physicians of the highest standing both in Europe and America.

BLANK DEEDS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

SCHOOL AT BORDENTOWN.

We congratulate the friends of the Church, at Bordentown, in the success which has crowned their laudable efforts in the cause of sound education. The Rev. SAMUEL EWING ARNOLD, whose advertisement will be in our next, has established a high reputation, as a teacher, during his connection, as Principal, with the Academy at Freehold. His papers, which have been submitted to us, including testimonials from Sir Howard Douglas, Lieutenant Governor of the Province of New Brunswick, from the President and Vice-President of King's College, Windsor, and from the Trustees of the School, over which he presided in that province before his coming to New Jersey, are of the most honorable character. An intimate personal acquaintance with him gives us the highest confidence in his fidelity and success. We know of no place more desirable as a residence for children, than Bordentown; and we commend the School, under Mr. Arnold's direction, to the most liberal patronage.—Ed. Missionary.

BORDENTOWN ACADEMY.

THE central position of Bordentown, its singular salubrity, and its facility of access from the principal cities in the Union, have long marked it out as a most eligible location for seminaries of learning. For the information of those who have not visited this town, the following extract from the Right Rev. Bishop Doane's last conventional address, is here inserted:—"There is certainly no place in the whole country, better fitted for the establishment and support of schools and seminaries of learning, than Bordentown. Most beautiful for its situation, proverbial for health, at the head of steamboat navigation, on the Delaware, and accessible twice in every day from New York, and from Philadelphia, the ground has but to be broken to ensure the most abundant harvest." The Reverend Mr. Arnold, A. M. of the University of Windsor, (Nova Scotia,) respectfully announces to the public, that arrangements have lately been completed for the establishment of a boarding, and day school here, which, (God willing,) will be ready for the reception of pupils on the first day of May. The building, which has been procured for the purposes of the school, is situated near the bank of the Delaware, more than sixty feet above the surface of the water, surrounded by a beautiful and convenient area for gymnastic exercises, and commanding an extensive prospect of the river and surrounding country, which, in beauty, richness, and variety of scenery is not surpassed by any in America. The school rooms are large and commodious, and the dormitories, which are spacious and airy, are sufficiently numerous to contain a hundred boarders. The whole establishment is every way adapted to its destined purpose. Mr. Arnold is happy in having in a member of his own family, a lady who has been long accustomed to the superintendence of young ladies, and who, from her amiable character and mild disposition, is peculiarly qualified for this office, while her natural and tender fondness for children will lead her almost spontaneously to use every means to promote the health, comfort, and convenience of the pupils. The most able and accomplished teachers will be employed to instruct in the various branches of useful and ornamental knowledge; nor will the morals of the pupils fail to receive that watchful attention which is due to their paramount importance,—"for what is good learning without good morals?" The system of government will be mild and parental, but sufficiently energetic to preserve perfect order and regularity. If any pupil shall be guilty of an inexcusable or wilful transgression, or moderate correction, to avoid the infection of a vicious example, notice will immediately be given to his parents of the necessity for his removal from the school. There will be two vacations in each year, the first of four weeks, commencing on the first Monday in October, the second, of the last two weeks in April. It is not deemed necessary to enter here into a more minute detail of the prospective operations of the school, nor to enumerate specifically the subjects, which will on different occasions and at various periods occupy the attention of teachers or pupils much less is it thought expedient to call the public attention to any particular talents or regularity of mind, or to the talents of the youthful mind. After all that can be said, the public confidence or rejection must depend on the teacher's success. Mr. Arnold has leave to refer to the gentlemen whose names are annexed and who, either from personal knowledge, authentic documents, or credible report from others, are qualified to give information of the result of his former experience in teaching, both in the United States and British America.

THE THREE JOLLY HUSBANDS.

Three jolly husbands, out in the country, by the names of Tim Watson, Joe Brown, and Bill Walker, sat late one evening drinking at a village tavern, until being pretty well combed, they agreed that each one on returning home should do the first thing but the last. They then separated for the night, engaging to meet again the next morning and gave an honest account of their proceedings at home, so far as they related to the payment of the bill.

The next morning, Walker and Brown were early at their posts, but it was some time before Watson made his appearance. Walker began first.

"You see when I entered my house the candle was out, and as the fire gave but a glimmering of light, I came near walking accidentally into a pot of batter that the pancakes were to be made of this morning. My wife who was dreadfully out of humor at setting up so long said to me sarcastically, 'Do you put your foot into the batter?' Just as you say, Maury, said I, 'I do, Watson, without the least hesitation, I set my foot in the pot of batter, and then—went to bed.'

Next Joe Brown told his story. "My wife," said he, "had already retired to rest in our usual sleeping room, which adjoins the kitchen, and the door of which was ajar. Not being able to navigate perfectly well, I, I know, I made a dreadful clattering among the household furniture, and my wife, in no very pleasant tone, bawled out, 'Do break the porridge-pot, Joe?' No sooner said than done. I seized hold of the pot, and striking it against the chimney jam, broke it in a hundred pieces. After this exploit, I retired to rest, and got a curtain lecture all night for my pains."

It was now Tim Watson's turn to give an account of himself; which he did with the following face, as follows: "My wife gave me the most of my command in the world, for, as I was blundering up stairs in the dark, she cried out, 'Do break your rotten neck, do Tim?'—I'll be c—d if I do, Kate, said I, as I gathered myself up, I'll sooner pay the bill. And so landlord, here's the cash for you. This is the last time I'll ever risk five dollars on the command of my wife."—Dr. Greene.

COBBETT IN 1797.

"There was a paper published at this time entitled 'Peter Porcupine,' which name, from a first association was transferred to Cobbett himself, by both friends and enemies. Nothing could have been more happy than the title, for it might have been said of him that he had a quill for every subject and a person 'noticed.'—The Farmer used to admire this paper for the Editor's excellent (and most beneficial) knowledge of agriculture, but his political character was the most famous, and with one party of people in the States had great influence and admiration, notwithstanding the violent personalities it indulged in. The paper occurred to me, that after this period, Anthony Pasquin emigrated to New York, and from his known ability was set up in a newspaper, by the opposite party, to combat with Cobbett; when the literary sparring that ensued between these two political champions, was not less novel than surprising to the Americans. In many respects (not less in private character than in public talents) no man could have been more alike than Pasquin and Cobbett, happy however, as they were in various styles, they excelled but in one and the same, personal sensibility, and as the old proverb informs us that 'two of a trade can never disagree,' their opinions were not less novel than surprising to the Americans. In many respects (not less in private character than in public talents) no man could have been more alike than Pasquin and Cobbett, happy however, as they were in various styles, they excelled but in one and the same, personal sensibility, and as the old proverb informs us that 'two of a trade can never disagree,' their opinions were not less novel than surprising to the Americans."

Instead of the general political purposes for which the contest was set on foot by their respective parties, it turned out to be a personal, and entirely unimportant to the public, and so it was to me they were striving to see who had the best knowledge of personal invective, was the most fluent in epigrams, and could best answer the antagonist to the greatest degree with the dirt of diction."

In 1828, the presses of the Federal party were engaged in the dignified and chivalrous work of slandering Mrs. Jackson—in 1832, Mrs. Jackson was the object of their jeers and insults. Now, we perceive that the private affairs of Col. JONSON are to be raked up and used for political effect. Many of the honest and correct of the opposition express astonishment that so little success attends their efforts—the reason is plain—no party can triumph, who resort to low contumacious and cowardly abuse of former political purposes.—Dayton Her.

"There is a man living in Aylesbury, who has acquired to complete a command over the muscles of his face that he can cry on one side and laugh on the other at the same time."

This Aylesbury man is not the only one in the world who can laugh and cry at the same time. The wig party furnishes many striking instances of the same feat, particularly since the result of the Baltimore Convention. They give a sort of Hyena grin, indicative of suppressed sorrow and forced joy.—Bost. Statesman.

"We have received No. 1, Vol. 2, of the annuals of Phrenology. This science appears to be rather in the wane—the practical jokes played upon some of its professors have shaken the confidence of the community in the belief of its correctness. A late French paper states that M. Magendie kept for several days at his house, the skull of M. de Laplace, between those of two idiots. The phrenologists, on examining these skulls, were obliged to make a mark in order to designate the one they belonged to. M. de Laplace and they did not succeed once in twenty times. Very recently the head of the sheep has been localized, the expression now used in France by phrenologists, and those which relate to ready wit, metaphysics, and a love of God.—B. Star.

Bigamy.—A mild writer in yesterday's Mercantile, publishes the bands of matrimony between the anti-masons and the whigs. We forbid the bands. That 'whig' is a great rake. He has been married to Federal, National Republican, Tariff, Bank and Panic, and got divorced from them all and threw them on the town. There have died from 'I usage, and the rest are lingering. It is monstrous, at this moment the husband of Nullification and keeps Masonry.—Ado.

In the anniversary address of Professor Tucker, before the Virginia Historical Society, the following singular fact is mentioned, as connected with the history of Virginia.

"In the year 1647, lawyers were forbidden to take any fees whatever, and in 1685, they were excluded from the Legislature!! For this unbecomingly act, it must be confessed that their descendants have made the amende honorable."

LORD BYRON AND MARY CHAWORTH.

BY WASHINGTON IRVING.

At about three miles distance from Newstead Abbey, and contiguous to its lands, is situated Annesley Hall, the old family mansion of the Chaworths. The families like the estates, of the Byrons and Chaworths, were connected in former times, until the fatal duel between their two representatives. The feud, however, which prevailed for a time, promised to be cancelled by the attachment of two youthful hearts. While Lord Byron was yet a boy, he beheld Mary Ann Chaworth, a beautiful girl, and the sole heiress of Annesley. With that susceptibility to female charms, which he evinced from childhood, he became almost immediately enamoured of her. According to one of his biographers it would appear that at first their attachment was mutual, yet clandestine. The father of Miss Chaworth was then living and may have retained somewhat of the hostility of Lord Byron and the young lady were private, at a gate which opened from her father's grounds to those of Newstead. However, they were so young at the time that those meetings could not have been regarded as of any importance; they were little more than children in years; but as Lord Byron says of himself his feelings were beyond his age.

The passion thus early conceived was blown into a flame, during a six weeks' vacation which he passed with his mother at Nottingham. The father of Miss Chaworth was dead, and she resided with her mother at the old Hall of Annesley. During Byron's minority, the estate of Newstead was left to Lord Grey de Ruthven, but his youthful Lord was always a welcome guest at the Abbey. He would pass days at a time there, and from thence make frequent visits to Annesley Hall. His visits were encouraged by Miss Chaworth's mother; she partook none of the family feud, and probably looked with complacency upon the attachment that might heal old differences and unite two neighboring estates.

The six weeks' vacation passed as a dream, amongst the beautiful bowers of Annesley. Byron was scarce 15 years of age, Mary Chaworth was two years older; but his heart, as I have said was beyond his age, and his tenderness for her was deep and passionate. These early loves, like the first run of the uncrushed grape, are the sweetest and strongest gushings of the heart, and however they may be superseded by other attachments in after years the memory will continually recur to them, and they will be united with the cone of the cloud when the whole column moved rapidly and majestically about a mile and a half up the river, where it struck the woods in Indiana nearly opposite to this city and disappeared. The whirlwind then passed over a part of Jeffersonville, unroofing houses and doing damages, but soon struck the river a second time, forming another water-spout, which crossed the river to the Kentucky side and disappeared a short distance above Geiger's Mills. On both sides of the river, the whirlwind's path is marked with desolation.—[Louisville Journal.

THE QUEEN OF STEAMBOATS.

"THE LEXINGTON" is the name of a new and elegant steamboat built in New York, under the direction of Capt. Cornelius Vanderbilt, to run between that city and Providence. She is said to be the fastest boat in the world. She made her first trip to Providence on Monday last, performing the passage in twelve hours and twenty-eight minutes, after deducting eight minutes for stops; and returned, on Wednesday, within twelve hours, with all ease. Her superiority over all the other excellent boats on that line, is said to lie in her firmness and ease in the water. The Lexington is constructed on a new and somewhat improved model. She is 208 feet long, has 22 feet beam, and 11 feet hold. Her deck is an arch, which brings the pressure against the ends of the timbers and planks instead of against their sides, thus enabling her to endure, on so long a time, the immense pressure which bears upon the stem and stern while she is forced through the water at so rapid a rate. The stroke of the piston is eleven feet, the diameter of the water-wheels twenty-two feet, and the revolutions from twenty-one to twenty-three a minute. The boiler and the weight of machinery, as far as possible, is placed in the hold. The Lexington has no wood-piles on deck, and the expense of fuel is not more than half so great as in an ordinary boat. What a desideratum this splendid boat must be to the travelling public! Boston and Providence Rail Road being now finished, the time of passing from the great Commercial time of the State about 500 Temperance Societies, embracing not far from 70,000 members; and that the cause is on the advance in most parts of the State. The Rev. Mr. Benan, moved the acceptance of the report, and addressed the assembly, which was very large, in an able and interesting speech. The Rev. Doctor Miller, addressed the female part of the audience on their influence in the good cause. Addresses were also made and resolutions offered by Rev. Mr. Brainerd, of Ohio, Rev. Mr. Gallaher, of Missouri, and Judge Darling, of Reading. The tone of temperance is high in western Pennsylvania. The meeting, it was thought, would give an impulse to the cause in Pittsburgh.

TEMPERANCE ANNIVERSARY.

The Pennsylvania State Temperance Society held its anniversary at Pittsburgh on the 26th ult. Doctor Agnew, of Harrisburg, and one of the Vice Presidents, presided, and the annual report was read by the Rev. J. Marsh, Cor. Sec. From this it appears that there are in the State about 500 Temperance Societies, embracing not far from 70,000 members; and that the cause is on the advance in most parts of the State. The Rev. From this it appears that there are in the State about 500 Temperance Societies, embracing not far from 70,000 members; and that the cause is on the advance in most parts of the State. The Rev. Mr. Benan, moved the acceptance of the report, and addressed the assembly, which was very large, in an able and interesting speech. The Rev. Doctor Miller, addressed the female part of the audience on their influence in the good cause. Addresses were also made and resolutions offered by Rev. Mr. Brainerd, of Ohio, Rev. Mr. Gallaher, of Missouri, and Judge Darling, of Reading. The tone of temperance is high in western Pennsylvania. The meeting, it was thought, would give an impulse to the cause in Pittsburgh.

NATIONAL NOMINATION!!
FOR NEXT PRESIDENT,
Martin Van Buren,
OF NEW YORK.
FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
Richard M. Johnson,
OF KENTUCKY.

ANDREW JACKSON.
"Who fills so vast a space in the public eye, and whose personal and official character, gives him a sway unequalled in this country, and perhaps in any other. He was visibly marked by the hand of Nature for a brilliant career; and qualified by lofty and stern attributes, both moral and intellectual, for the highest destiny which he has been summoned to fill in the world."—Col. Johnson at the Thames Dinner.

From the Globe.
COL. JOHNSON'S REPLY TO THE
COMMITTEE OF THE BALTI-MORE CONVENTION.

We ask for Colonel Johnson's letter a candid and attentive perusal. It is honest history—not profession—and has the devoted patriotism of a long life—the consistent democracy of thirty years public service, to stand as guaranties that he will not be wanting in the maintenance of the principles to which he stands pledged by the great fundamental doctrine of his political faith—obedience to the will of the People. If called to the Vice Presidency, it will be, on the part of the People, recognition of the doctrines he avows; and for his own sake and theirs he will feel himself equally bound to maintain the grounds taken in his letter of acceptance.

From the Richmond Enquirer.
COL. JOHNSON'S LETTER.

We are obliged to Mr. Stevenson for the following interesting correspondence. Col. Johnson's reply was received on Sunday last—and we hasten to lay it before the public. He now avows all National Banks under every modification—and declares his determination to carry out the principles of the Jefferson school, and the precepts of the present administration. He pays a warm and handsome tribute to the exalted talents and sound principles of Mr. Rives—and with a modesty equal to his liberality, attributes the preference of the Convention only to service, and not to any superior qualifications of his own. He significantly avers, that his "highest political ambition will be more than satisfied," by the office to which he has thus been nominated. For one, we are most anxious to do Col. Johnson full justice—to extenuate nothing from the services he has rendered to his country—to respect the blood he has freely shed in her struggle—not to set down aught in malice.—We lend him a liberal, even though it may not be a favorable, ear—and most cheerfully do we give the use of our columns to the following Exposition, for the consideration of others. It is well understood that Col. Johnson is not the man whom we prefer for the Vice President—but he has a right to be heard.

May 23, 1835.
Sir: A convention of Republican delegates, from various parts of the Union, for the purpose of selecting suitable candidates for the offices of President and Vice President, assembled in Baltimore on the 20th instant, and agreed to present to their country, your name for that of Vice President. We have been requested to communicate to you this nomination, and ask your acceptance of the same. We take pleasure in performing this duty, and respectfully solicit an answer at such time as may suit your convenience to give one.

With sentiments of high esteem and respect, we have the honor to be, your obedient servants,

A. STEVENSON, Pres't.

J. B. NEVITT,
FRANKLIN CANNON,

V. Pres'ts of the National Convention.
To R. M. JOHNSON, of Ky.

GREAT CROSSINGS, 9th June, 1835.

Gentlemen: I have had the honor to receive your letter, informing me that I have been nominated by the recent Republican Convention at Baltimore, as a candidate for the office of Vice President.

For this expression of confidence from the Republican party of the Union, I have not language to express my gratitude. For the exalted talents, pure character, and sound principles of the gentleman, whose name was brought in competition with mine, no man can have a higher respect than myself; and had he been preferred by the Convention, it would have afforded me the highest pleasure to give him my cordial support. To my greater age and longer public service, and not to superior qualifications, can I attribute the preference of the Convention; and if any injury should accrue to the Republican cause from that preference, no man will deplore it more than myself. As, however, the Convention were undoubtedly better qualified to judge on that point, than one or a few individuals possibly can be, I have but to accept the proffered nomination, and resign myself to the will of the People, as it may be expressed at the polls.

The gratification I feel at the honor done me is not unmingled with regret—a regret arising not from the preference of another by a portion of the Convention, but from the error under which they appear to have labored in relation to my political principles. I do not know myself, if my principles do not accord with those of Thomas Jefferson, the Patriarch of Republicanism, and his disciples who constituted the late Convention. During almost the whole period comprised in the Administration of Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe, I was a member of Congress and gave them my cordial support. From the earliest moment, I uniformly acted with the republican party, founded on the principles asserted by Virginia in 1798, and never withheld my support on any occasion, from either of the distinguished men, who, in succession became the representatives of these principles at the head of the Government, save only in the struggle of 1814, '15, and '16, for the establishment of a National Bank. President Madison then, and many of my Republican associates in Congress, who concurred with me in principle, felt themselves constrained to yield up their objections to what they considered the highest law—public necessity. I continued to believe the remedy worse than the disease. I had voted against the recharter of the old Bank of the United States, in 1811, from a conviction of its dangerous tendencies as well as unconstitutional. Upon the same grounds I felt constrained to vote against the establishment of the present Bank in 1816, although advocated by the Administration to which I was attached. I voted against the bill to recharter this Bank in 1832.

In 1834, I voted for Mr. Polk's resolution, declaring that the Bank of the U. States ought to be rechartered, and I defended the President's measure in regard to the removal of the Public Deposites, at every point at which it was assailed, with a view to sever the connexion between the Government and the Bank, and to make sure of a final deliverance from the Institution. Indeed, I have never wavered in my opinion against its constitutionality, and have never seen my vote for any similar institution. I cannot conceive how the opinion got abroad that I was in favor of the Bank, or of any such unconstitutional monopoly, unless it be from the circumstances that I did not, with the ardor of younger politicians, pledge myself against every possible substitute for the present Bank. Gen. Jackson, in one of his annual messages, suggested the outline of a substitute without stockholders, or power to make loans, as I understand it; and in his veto message, he declared that he could have furnished constitutional objections. Many of his friends believed that it would be absolutely necessary to have some substitute, and suggested a variety of schemes. To all these I listened without giving my assent to any; and never for a moment did I harbor a thought of proposing or supporting any one, except in the event or failure in the experiment to use the State Banks; and then only such a scheme as should be entirely free from constitutional objections, and have the approbation of the Administration and the Republican party.

The recent developments of the power of doing mischief possessed of a National Bank, and the uncontrollable tendency to use this power to direct the policies of the country, have satisfied me that no such institution should be tolerated, under any circumstances. The facility and success with which the public business has recently been done through the State Banks, have, in my opinion, proved that a National institution is as unnecessary as it is unsafe and unconstitutional.

In relation to the tariff, my views appear also not to be understood. At the close of the last war, the general sentiment, seemed to prevail among our eminent statesmen, especially those who had supported the Government in that conflict, that it was the true policy of the Government so to regulate the tariff, as to promote the establishment of manufactures within our borders. In this opinion, many statesmen from the South united with those of the middle and western States.

Without being distinguished as a peculiar advocate of the course of legislation which grew up under these circumstances, I gave my support in pursuance of public opinion. As soon, however, as I perceived the dangers which were likely to grow out of this species of legislation pushed to excess, I became an advocate for the reduction of the tariff, and voted for every proposition having that end in view, down and including the compromise which was made at the session of 1832-3. That compromise ought to be considered by all good citizens as putting an end to the question. No prudent and patriotic man will, I am sure, ever attempt a renewal of that species of legislation. For myself, can sincerely say, that I should consider any attempt of that sort as savouring of enmity to the government, inasmuch as it is unnecessary as a measure of policy, and would certainly revive a controversy more dangerous to our Union than any other which has arisen since the adoption of the Federal Constitution. The preservation of the Union, and the harmony of its members, are incomparably more important than any system of legislation which regards only the pecuniary interests of a portion of the people.

The same remarks are applicable in a great degree, to the subject of internal improvements. In relation to them, it may also be observed, that the success of the several States, in their prosecution and the great local interests vested in them, together with the consideration that the States manage their concerns with more care and economy than the General Government, are persuasive arguments against Federal interference in them hereafter, beyond such works as are universally conceded to be of a National character.

In fine, I consider the views of President Jackson, on the Tariff and Internal Improvements, as founded in true wisdom; and as far as I may hereafter be enabled, it will be my earnest endeavor to give them efficiency in the administration of the Government.

On these leading subjects, I felt it my duty to touch, because it seems to have been erroneously apprehended by some, that I would be disposed to use the influence of high official station, to restore an expiring Monopoly, and certain mischievous systems of policy which experience has exploded. It is mortifying to me, that such impressions should have obtained any credence whatever, since the steady, though not boisterous support, which I have given to the President in his persevering and successful warfare on those systems. So far from entertaining any such design or desire, I look upon myself as selected by the Convention, for the purpose of aiding to make permanent the principles and policy in the administration of our Government, which have recently been sanctioned by such decided marks of public approbation, and to which I am pledged alike by inclination and duty.

On other subjects, a public life of thirty years uninterrupted activity has, I trust, been sufficient to enable my countrymen to understand my principles and my motives of action. I believe no man will charge me with dereliction of duty towards my country, or my countrymen. In devotion to my country, no one will say that I have been wanting; and I trust that mine has not been "a faith without works." My constituents have never charged me with neglect of their interests, collectively or individually; and, to an American citizen, complaining of wrong, and asking the aid of a friend, wherever residing or however poor, unknown and humble, I have never turned a deaf ear, or refused to labor for him, as for a brother. To this faithfulness, and these exertions to be useful, more than to any extraordinary qualifications in me, do I attribute the honor which the Convention have done me; and should the people respond favorably to the recommendation of that body, my highest political ambition will be more than satisfied. It will be a confirmation, by the voice of my whole country, of the repeated proofs of approbation, given by the people of my own State, to the well-meant labors of a life devoted to the service of the nation.

But, whatever may be the face of the kind partiality of the members of the Convention, coming from almost every State in the Union, as the representatives of the Democratic party, with which it has been my pride to act throughout my public career, I shall ever cherish with the most affectionate recollections, a deep sense of the obligation they have conferred.

You will please, gentlemen, to accept the assurances of my high respect and consideration, while I remain, most respectfully your friend and fellow citizen.

R. M. JOHNSON.

TORNADO.

Our city experienced a most awful visitation, about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a TORNADO having swept through it from the western suburbs down to the river, and in its resistless course, destroying a vast amount of property, to which we regret to say, must be added a number of lives. It was first seen approaching from the west, and from the clouds of dust, shingles, &c., that rose in the air, was supposed by the inhabitants of the lower and central parts of the city to proceed from a heavy fire, and the alarm bells were rung; but the flying of roofs, rafters and trees, in every direction, soon taught them that a hurricane was rushing with awful violence through the town, leaving a complete mass of ruins to mark its track. Where it first commenced we cannot correctly learn, but it is said in the vicinity of north of Trenton: a report says many of the farm houses and barns northward of the turnpike, are blown down or otherwise injured. Having struck several houses a little distance from the town, it reached the hill, where it remained apparently fixed for a minute or two, presenting the appearance of a pillar of fire, its base resting on the earth, and its top reaching a mass of black clouds. It then took an eastern course, threatening Albany and Church streets, but suddenly changing its direction, swept the town into its jaws towards the dwellings of Mr. B. Myer, Mrs. Deane, Prof. McClelland, Rev. John Croes, L. Kirkpatrick, Esq. Mr. Kirkpatrick, and Rev. Dr. Janeway, tearing the roofs off of some, making literal wrecks of the barns and out-houses, and either uprooting or twisting off the largest trees—in some instances carrying the latter twenty or thirty paces. It then crossed to the buildings at the head of Patterson, Liberty, Bayard and Schureman street, unroofing the house of Mrs. Harrison, levelling the store of Mr. Little, and burying beneath the falling timbers, Nicholas Boornem, Esq., and his eldest son Henry. Both were extricated a short time after—the son in a dying state, in which he lingered until nine o'clock last night, when death relieved him from his suffering—the father seriously, but we believe, not dangerously hurt. A young lad, about 8 years of age, son of Captain Kirk, was also killed near this spot, a rafter from the Blacksmith shop having struck him immediately above the eyes, and almost severed his head. A female, a widow named Van Arsdale, was found dead under a building in Schureman street. The Tornado now swept with increased force across the street, down Liberty, Schureman and New streets, crossing Nelson and Burnet street, a quarter of a mile in distance, down to the river, unroofing or tearing off the tops of the houses, and sweeping the lower doors and windows from their fastenings. Schureman and Liberty sts., from top to bottom, may be said to be a complete mass of ruins, as is likewise said to be Burnet street. The Methodist Church, a brick edifice, is damaged beyond repair, having been unroofed, and the eastern and southern walls blown down; and the rear wall of the Catholic Church, also of brick, is drove into the body of the building. The pottery of Mr. Newell, in George street, (part of it strongly built of brick,) the carpenter shop of Francis F. Randolph, and the extensive coachmaking establishment of Mr. Richard Voorhees, in Schureman street, the stores of Bush and Probasco, and George H. Stout, in Burnet street, together with some few dwellings, are entirely destroyed.

The loss to our citizens in the destruction of buildings and other property, must be immense. Various estimates place it at from one hundred to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars; and as upwards of one hundred and twenty dwellings, besides stores, storehouses, &c. are either greatly damaged or entirely ruined, we scarcely think the latter sum will exceed the amount of loss.

The accounts from the country lying in the track of the hurricane, particularly east of the Raritan, are fearful, and we hope, more exaggerated. The village of Piscataway, two miles from this city, is said to have suffered much; and anxiety is felt for other parts of the country both east and west of us. No one closing, we are precluded from making further remarks, but will give a more particular account in our next number.

SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES.

THE subscribers, as associated Principals, propose opening in Lexington, on Monday, the 6th of July next, a permanent institution for the education of Young Ladies. While their primary object will be to impart a sound, thorough course of instruction, with direct reference to the judicious developments of the intellects and the cultivation of the moral characters of those committed to their charge, those branches commonly deemed ornamental, shall receive due attention. Believing that no course of education can be thorough or judicious, in which the Sacred Scriptures are neglected, the higher classes will have assigned them one recitation a week in the Bible. A sound and practical exposition of the Sacred Volume, embracing the collateral subjects, will be aimed at, without the slightest attempt to create a sectarian bias.

Having had some considerable experience in training the youthful mind, the subscribers pledge themselves to use the most unremitting efforts to promote the intellectual and moral culture of their pupils. One female assistant is engaged; others will be procured when needed. The Chemical Philosophical apparatus necessary for the illustration of the natural sciences will be furnished. Special attention will be given to the subject of original composition, with the view of teaching the pupil to write with facility and elegance. The terms of tuition are very moderate. The School Rooms are pleasantly situated on Limestone street, on the same lot with the dwelling house of the Rev. J. F. Coons; in whose family several pupils can be accommodated with boarding, at the prices usual in the city.

NOTICE.

TO persons having business with the Patent

Office. The Patent Law directs, that "every inventor, before he presents his petition to the Secretary of State, signifying his desire of obtaining a patent, shall pay into the Treasury thirty dollars, and take duplicate receipts, one of which receipts he shall deliver to the Secretary of State, when he presents his petition."

It has been the practice in many cases, to send the money above mentioned to the Secretary of State, or to the Superintendent of the Patent Office, but in future, all applicants for patents will conform to the directions of the law on the subject, and make the required payments into the Treasury.

It will be a compliance with the law, in this respect, to pay the money to the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, or to his credit in any one of the selected deposit Banks. The receipts should state by whom the payment is made, and for what object.

As a notice to this effect was published on the 3d of October last, sufficient time has elapsed for its being known to those interested.—Therefore, fees for patents which may be sent to the Secretary of State or Superintendent to the Patent Office, after the 1st of May, will be returned.

Fees for copies of patents, specifications, or drawings, or for recording assignments, should be transmitted to the Superintendent of the Patent Office, in coin, where they under that sum will not be received.

JOHN FORSYTH.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
April 1, 1835.

The newspapers authorized to publish the laws will insert this notice weekly three times; and send their accounts to the Superintendent of the Patent Office.

LEXINGTON.

SATURDAY, JULY 4, 1835.

AFTER a lapse of twenty-five years, the subscriber is about to resume the onerous and important duties of editing the KENTUCKY GAZETTE. The change in the manner and temper, in which public journals are now conducted, when compared with the by-gone days, might have deterred him from this difficult and at present certainly unpleasant occupation; yet he has the vanity to believe, that by pursuing his former course, of courtesy to all, whether belonging to his political school or not—of invading no man's rights or reputation, the era of good feeling may be restored, and political hotspurs brought to reflect on what is due to a brother man, whatever may be his political opinions or personal partialities.

This was one motive which has induced him to become the Editor of the Gazette. Another might be presumed, when he states, that the Gazette was originally commenced by his father in 1787, who conducted it until 1804, when he presented it to the subscriber, who continued to manage it for many years. Those circumstances would naturally account for his attachment to the old Gazette.

In re-entering on the duties of an Editor, the subscriber thinks but few professions are necessary. His political opinions are not unknown to the country—he professes to be a Republican—will endeavor to support the Baltimore Nomination for President and Vice President; but will not prostitute his press by assailing the private character of any man, or permit the vile epithets, too common in use, to be applied to the eminent patriots, who may aspire to office, however, they may differ with him in their views of policy. If the representations of partisan Editors were true, we have not, for years, had a candidate for any high office, who ought not, in justice, to have been elevated to the gallows. He believes the conductors of the political journals have mistaken the taste of the people—that it is not of that morbid character to be satisfied with nothing but foul abuse and slander. And he is determined to test his opinion by trying the experiment. He expects to present a paper which will aid in sustaining his political party, and yet not be loathed by his adversaries.—Believing he is contending with gentlemen, he will endeavor not to forget to maintain that character himself.

With these few declarations of the manner in which he proposes to conduct the Gazette, the subscriber solicits an extension of patronage in subscriptions and advertisements; and not asking its continuance should he cease to conduct the paper in the manner proposed.

His Editorial labours will commence the first day of July.

We have sent subscription papers to several of our friends, and would thank them to return a list.

The Cholera still prevails in Maysville, but not with such fatality as it has done. The first day it appeared in West Union, Ohio, there were 12 cases and 8 deaths. It prevails in Nashville, Tenn., Columbia, Ky., in fact through most of the western country. God knows how long Lexington may be exempt from the dreadful scourge.—Should it reach us we subscribe to the recommendation of the Maysville Monitor: "Be cautious—do nothing which is calculated to put your system out of order—be mild, be calm—be resolved, be moderate, in every thing, without depriving yourself of proper nourishment." But we would add, on the first appearance of disordered bowels, if a Physician is not at hand, take from ten to twenty grains of Calomel.

Our city still enjoys its unusual good health, and has been, for some weeks, much enlivened by the influx of distinguished strangers as visitors—among whom, the Hon. George Poindexter and lady arrived last week, in good health, and took lodgings at the Lexington Hotel.

His Excellency John H. Eaton, Governor of Florida and lady, arrived on Wednesday evening and took lodgings at the Phoenix Hotel, from whence he set out for Washington City, the evening following.

The City Council on Thursday, passed an ordinance prohibiting slaves, under the penalty of ten lashes, from taking charge of the baggage of any passenger arriving in the rail road car, for the purpose of carrying such baggage to any public Inn in the City, unless such slave be the servant of such passenger, or attached to such Inn.

Robert C. Walker, Esq. has been appointed by the Governor of Mississippi, U. S. Senator, vice George Poindexter, Esq. whose term of service had expired.

FOURTH OF JULY.—To enable the workmen of this office to participate in the celebration of the Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Gazette is issued the preceding evening.

There will be a public dinner at the old ground, (Maxwell's spring,) prepared by Mr. G. L. Pryor.

We are grateful for the number of new subscribers added to our list the two last days. Should any of them be accidentally neglected by the Carrier, they will please notify us of the fact.

Col. Combs has been invited through the Observer, to become a candidate for the State Legislature. In that paper of Wednesday last, he makes the following response:

Messrs. FINNELL & WICKLIFFE. Gentlemen: I have been publicly called on by a number of respectable citizens of this county, to become a candidate for the Legislature. The same reasons which induced me not to have my name presented for a seat in the Senate, when desired to do so some time since, still influence me; and I therefore respectfully decline being a candidate. I beg to tender through the medium of your paper, my grateful acknowledgements to the gentlemen who have addressed me on this subject, in terms so kind and flattering.

Respectfully your obdt. servt.

As a specimen of the prophetic sagacity of some of our political opponents, we ask the readers of the Danville "Olive Branch" to peruse the following scrap, which made its appearance in that paper October 25, 1834. It was evidently observed in searching for other matter.

"Our election news will be found on the first page of to-day's paper. It is truly heart cheering. Mr. Van Buren will hardly be thought of for the next Government." Maj. Downing's "Prenatal Toys" are vanishing fast, and the nation will soon be cured of the "Kolaria."

Does the Editor of that paper now believe that "Mr. Van Buren will hardly be thought of for the next President? No, indeed, the party that attempted to rule the country, is almost annihilated; and those who declaimed loudest in favor of the United States Bank, now say, that the Bank is dead—dead, and never to be revived; but the people are not dead, and will not soon forget those who have deceived them.

The dispute between Ohio and the Territory of Michigan, in relation to the boundary line is still unsettled. The Columbus Monitor of the 24th June, inserts the special message of Governor Lucas, transmitting the letter from the department of State, and makes the following remarks:

EXTRA SESSION.

The General Assembly adjourned on Saturday morning, after holding a session of thirteen days. They passed the following acts: "To erect the county of Lucas; authorizing the Governor to accept the propositions of the United States Commissioners;" "making appropriations to carry into effect the law of last winter;" "a bill to prevent the forcible abduction of citizens of this state;" and a resolution "in relation to the imprisonment of John E. Fletcher."

The first named act provides that a new county shall be formed out of the counties of Sandusky, Wood and Henry, with Toledo for the county seat and covers the greater part of the disputed territory. Judges of the Court of Common Pleas have been appointed for the same. The second act provides that if the Government of the United States and Michigan will permit the peaceable running of the line, then all prosecutions for past offences, and all coercive jurisdiction shall cease till the next sitting of Congress. The appropriation act provides $300,000 to enable the governor to carry into effect the act of last session, provided the compromise bill is not accepted. The forcible abduction act, makes it a Penitentiary offence to carry off any citizen of Ohio.

We hope that not much positive evil will grow out of the whole proceedings of the last session. We have very little expectation that any good will result from

it. We do earnestly implore all who are entrusted with the execution of these laws of Ohio, and those entrusted with the counteracting laws of Michigan to use them in the spirit of forbearance. The least rash step may produce civil war. Who can think of that with composure?

Appointments by the President.—William Marvin, to be Attorney for the Southern District of Florida.
John A. Parker, to be Consul for the port of Brazora in Texas, Mexico.

It is stated in the Globe that Dr. Samuel Moore has resigned the office of Director of the Mint of the United States, to take effect on the first of the next month, and that Robert M. Patterson, M. D. of the University of Virginia, has been appointed to succeed him.—Balt. American.

We are gratified to have in our power to announce that Edward Livingston, Esq. late Minister Plenipotentiary to France, reached New York on the 13d inst. in the Frigate Constitution. We understand that his latest communications have been received at the State Department. We have reason to believe they have given entire satisfaction to the Executive, as they will doubtless to the American People when made public. Mr. Livingston is hourly expected in this city. He will be received every where with the demonstrations of cordial affection and respect, that distinguished his reception at New York.—Globe.

Arrival of the frigate Constitution.—The New York papers announce the arrival at that port of the U. S. frigate Constitution, Commodore Elliott, having on board Mr. Livingston, our Minister to France, and his family. She left Plymouth May 17. On coming into the North River, on Tuesday morning, she fired a salute which was returned from Castle William. The Journal of Commerce says—"Mr. Livingston and family came ashore in a lieutenant's barge, under a second salute, and landed on the steps at Castle Garden. A great crowd had assembled on the Battery, who gave the Minister a very cordial reception, and accompanied him to the house of a friend at the lower end of Greenwich street. From the steps, Mr. Livingston addressed his fellow-citizens in a brief speech, which was answered by hearty cheers.

"He expressed the satisfaction he felt at the cordial reception which had been given him, and assured his countrymen that during his absence it had been his constant desire to secure the rights and maintain the honor of the United States. He then withdrew to a window in the chamber, and a friend announced that in consequence of fatigue, it would be impossible for Mr. L. at that time to receive his fellow citizens individually, but it was expected that the Corporation of the city would make a speedy arrangement for that purpose.

"We are glad to learn from the conversation of Mr. Livingston that his return to the United States is not to be taken as an evil omen. Among the reasons for it is the desire to put the President in possession of his views more fully than he could well do by letter. He has not perceived among the people or in the government of France, any hostile disposition towards us.—On the whole, we find nothing to shake our often expressed confidence, that our affairs with France will be brought to a satisfactory and friendly issue. Mr. Livingston will soon repair to Washington, and no doubt government will in some way put the people in possession of the impressions made by his statements."

From the New York Evening Post.

The following extracts from various French journals are furnished us by the arrival of the Constitution. Whatever throws any light upon the disposition of the French people in relation to the question in dispute between their Government and ours, must possess interest for our readers.

From the Gazette de France (Carlisle) 30th April 1835.
The Sun, after citing the article of the Gazette de France, which speaks of the departure of Mr. Livingston as a necessary consequence of the amendment introduced in the projet de loi of the twenty-five millions, thinks that there will not be, on this account, a rupture between France and the United States. Such is the opinion which the Courier now expresses. General Jackson will readily say, according to the Courier, that he did not intend directly to threaten France, and that after this short explanation on both sides, all will be finished.

From the Ben Sans, (opposition) copied by the Gazette de France, 30th April.

Mr. Livingston, in the last interview which he had with M. de Broglie, held towards him nearly this language: "All the wrongs of which you complain so bitterly have not been directly addressed to you. The Message of the President is an address of him to Congress, and not of him to France. It is a business of internal concern in which you ought not to meddle, and about which you had no right to take offence. Have we taken offence from any of your speeches in the Chamber, of your epithets of smugglers and cheats which have been applied to us by your orators? Imitate our reserve, and do not make a public question of that which is only a domestic one. It is true that it is now too late to give you this advice. You have adhered to the amendment of M. Valaze, which, in our opinion, virtually annuls the Treaty. For this reason, I am obliged to return to the United States, and to refer this matter to my Government."

The trial before the French Chamber of Peers of the rioters at Lyons and elsewhere, excites naturally deep attention in France as well as the rest of Europe. It is an extraordinary proceeding, which involves important consequences. One hundred and twenty individuals, who have already been imprisoned for a twelve-month, are brought to Paris; and attended, by their numerous counsel, appear at the bar of the Chamber of Peers. That such a body should be a constitutional tribunal on such an occasion, is an anomaly which should not be found in a government where the throne is "surrounded by republican institutions." So great was the tumult that it was impossible to proceed with the trial. The Peers remanded the accused to prison, decreeing that their trial should be conducted without their presence, and that it should be conducted, not by the advocates chosen by the prisoners themselves, but by members of the bar of Paris, elected by the Peers. This usurpation added of course to the excitement prevalent in France, and is calculated to heap further unpopularity upon the load which already weighs upon Louis Philippe.—Baltimore American.

Election of President by the House of Representatives.—It is admitted by every unprejudiced Whig that the only chance of success for the Whig candidate is in bringing the election into the House of Representatives. There are few, among them who will confess that their prospect of bringing about this result is in the slightest degree favorable. But a drowning man will catch at straws, and the cause of the Whigs is so desperate that they grasp at anything however slight, that they think will save them.

We wish to keep distinctly before the people the fact that the Whigs are determined if possible to carry the Election of President into the House of Representatives. They despair of success with the people. They know the unpopularity of their cause. They feel that the people are not with them, and their calculations are based on the hope of outmaneuvering the people. One of their great idols, Tristram Burgess, who thanked God that he never was a democrat, has avowed that he trusts that an election of President may never be made in any other manner than by the House of Representatives, and there is not a Whig paper in the country that has disavowed his opinions. We ask the people—the voters of all parties—whether they intend to keep the power of electing a President in their own hands or whether they are willing that it should be taken from them.

The election of President by the House of Representatives is indeed constitutional, but every one must regret the necessity of exercising it. When John Quincy Adams was elected President by the House of Representatives, General Jackson had received the highest number of votes given by the people. What was the consequence? The people, incensed, not only at the election of a man whom they had rejected, but at the manner of his election, and the bargain and intrigue by which it was brought about, determined that he should no longer occupy a place to which he had been elevated contrary to their will. That will they are determined to enforce, and the question now submitted to them is not merely whether they will elect the candidates of the Baltimore Convention, but whether they will retain the election in their own hands. Can any man in his senses question their decision for a moment?—N. Y. Times.

The Hon. John H. Eaton.—This gentleman having recently paid a visit to New Orleans, his democratic friends in that city tendered to him a public dinner as a mark of their respect and esteem. He was compelled by his private engagements to decline the honor.

DOCTORS

CROSS AND BLACKBURN WILL practice Medicine in all its departments in the city of Lexington and its vicinity. The former having paid, during his recent attendance upon the Medical schools and Hospitals of Europe, great attention to Surgery and Midwifery, would be glad to engage in the practice of those branches of the art.

To those laboring under Stone or Gravel, Dr. Cross would say, that he has it now in his power to offer them a means of relief for their sufferings, not only safe and effectual, but comparatively painless and bloodless. The operation he proposes to perform, is denominated LITHOTOMY, and comprehends in its instrumental apparatus no cutting instrument. It was invented by Baron Heurteloup, and it is at this time practiced with the greatest possible degree of success in both Paris and London. In proof of its claims upon the confidence of the public, it is sufficient to say, that a very great number of the most celebrated Surgeons of Europe have given it their unqualified approbation; among whom we may mention the names of Sir Astley Cooper, Sir Benjamin Brodie and the late Baron Duperren.

As the operation of Civiale has been attempted in the West, and I believe with results altogether unsatisfactory, he deems it proper to remark that the one here offered, to the public is totally unlike it in its principle, and he has commanded a degree of success, for which he or his warmest friends never contended. While that of Civiale is abandoned by every one but himself, that of Baron Heurteloup is admired, supported and practiced by daily increasing numbers of Surgeons.

LARGE SHEEP.

THERE was imported last year from England to the city of New York, a very superior young Ram of the Bakewell breed, combining advantages as to cross and fleece and early maturity superior to all others. Live weight of this buck 107 lbs. Weight of fleece 12 lbs. This valuable animal cost in England eighty pounds Sterling as per statement of the importer, of whom Mr. Seymour of Ohio got him, of whom I purchased him.

It is thought by those that have given this subject much attention, that a cross of the Bakewell on the common or part blooded Merino Sheep of Kentucky will be of great utility, by which a much heavier carcass and heavier fleece will be obtained, yielding a description of wool well adapted to family purposes, and for the manufacture of jeans and negro clothing, besides the great increased value of the carcass, worth to the butcher double the money now paid for mutton of the common breed.

To import such a Ram from England to Kentucky, would cost six hundred dollars. Mr. Seymour purchased a young Ewe of the same breed from the celebrated flock of Mr. Barney near Philadelphia, which cost fifty dollars each on Mr. Barney's farm. These three sheep are now in the neighborhood of Lexington.—I propose to sell half the interest in the three to any gentleman that would take a lively interest in extending the breed; for the sum of three hundred dollars. The Buck to be to Ewe at ten dollars each, or to purchase a sufficient number of Ewes to breed from, and sell the young ones, to make it an equal joint concern in risk, disbursements, expense, profit, &c.

A sample of the Bucks' fleece may be seen on application to Mr. Richard Curt, Lexington, who will give information whether the three sheep will be sent. If I do not make a satisfactory disposition of them before the first of August, they will be removed from the neighborhood of Lexington, near Ghent, Gallatin county, Kentucky.

M. E. BROWNING & CO.

HAVING purchased of CALEB WORLEY, his stock of MERCHANDIZE, which is extensive and well assorted, now offer it Wholesale and Retail, on as fair and reasonable terms as like goods can be bought in any market west of the mountains. They are resolved to spare no pains to accommodate and please those who may favor them with a call. To the old patrons of the house, they look with much confidence, and solicit a continuance of their custom, from which it is hoped a mutual benefit and satisfaction will be derived.

CALEB WORLEY, having sold his stock of merchandise to M. E. BROWNING & Co. takes great pleasure in recommending to his old customers and patrons, a continuance of their dealing with his successors, at the old stand, opposite the upper end of the Public Square. He would at the same time very sincerely express his thanks for the liberal patronage extended to him during his continuance in business. It is his wish as speedily as possible to close his business, and he hopes that all those who have open accounts will call and close them by note or payment without delay.
